

ROBERT'S REFLECTIONS ROBERT'S REFLECTIONS

This Thursday is the traditional observation of Thanksgiving Day in the United States. Hopefully all Americans will pause to remember just how grateful they should be for the privileges and blessings available to us. Hopefully, I say, but probably not. It is doubtful that an attitude of gratitude will prevail in this great land because of the turn our general population and our government has taken for materialism, humanism, and a growing agnosticism toward God and things religious.

Friends, this is nothing new. Back in 1863 an honorable statesman from Kentucky wrote the following:

It is the duty of nations as well as of man to own their dependence upon the overruling power of God; to confess their sins and transgressions in humble sorrow, yet with assured hope that genuine repentance will lead to mercy and pardon; and to recognize the sublime truth, announced in the Holy Scriptures and proven by all history, that those nations are blessed whose God is the Lord.

We know that by His divine law, nations, like individuals, are subjected to punishments and chastisements in this world. May we not justly fear that the awful calamity of civil war which now desolates the land may be a punishment inflicted upon us for our presumptuous sins, to the needful end of our national reformation as a whole people?

We have been the recipients of the choicest bounties of heaven; we have been preserved these many years in peace and prosperity; we have grown in numbers, wealth and power as no other nation has ever grown.

But we have forgotten God. We have forgotten the gracious hand which preserved us in peace and multiplied and enriched and strengthened us, and we have vainly imagined, in the deceitfulness of our hearts, that all these blessings were produced by some superior wisdom and virtue of our own. Intoxicated with unbroken success, we have become too self-sufficient to feel the necessity of redeeming and preserving grace, too proud to pray to the God that made us.

It has seemed to me fit and proper that God should be solemnly, reverently and gratefully acknowledged, as with one heart and one voice, by the whole American people. I do therefore invite my fellow citizens in every part of the United States, and also those who are at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands, to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November, a day of Thanksgiving and praise to our beneficent Father Who dwelleth in the heavens. — Abraham Lincoln, 1863

Isn't it a shame that our government leaders and most of the influential people in our society do not reflect the same values and opinions?

May the Lord help us all to be thankful every day, and especially during this time of the year. When you gather with family and friends this Thanksgiving Day, remind everyone to be truly thankful to our good God for all He has done for us and given to us. Remember... Thanksgiving is not just a holiday... it is a state of mind.
